End cancer as we know it, for everyone.

Whether from the devastation of a diagnosis or watching a loved one suffer – the realities of cancer are unrelenting. Cancer affects us all.

One in two men and one in three women in the US will be diagnosed with cancer during their lifetime. There's a good chance you have been touched by cancer, or you have a loved one or dear friend who is coping with this disease.

Nearly 3.8 million lives have been saved because of generous donors like you, and we've seen a 33% decline in the cancer death rate since 1991.

Together, we are stronger than cancer.

What Defines Your Legacy?

Your legacy should be a celebration of your life. It's an opportunity to pass on your assets, but also a chance to share your personal values with those closest to you.

Your will or estate plan is how you communicate your hopes for the future and how you would like to be remembered. It's vitally important to make your wishes known in a legal and binding document, like a will or trust, to ensure that your intentions are clear.

A comprehensive will and estate plan can save you time and money. The enclosed worksheets will help you organize and document your information in one place. Being prepared can save you taxes, probate fees, and avoid confusion and unnecessary problems for your loved ones.

Legacy planning is a gift to your family, your loved ones, yourself.

Many of our supporters like to include a gift in their plans that will continue to save and improve more lives from cancer. Estate gifts are one of our largest funding sources for groundbreaking cancer research, patient support and community programs, and government advocacy efforts. We hope you will consider including the American Cancer Society in your estate plan.

Planning for the Future

Would it surprise you to learn the majority of people don't have a valid will? It's true. Having a will or trust is the most important thing you can do for yourself and your family. Without one, you have no control over the future of your assets and may lose any opportunity to act on your dreams or goals.

Your will or trust helps you:

- Document your assets, so they're distributed exactly as you'd like.
- Save time and money and avoid probate for your heirs.
- Determine the person you trust to execute your plan as you intend.
- Choose the right person to manage your affairs should you become incapacitated.

Life can take unexpected turns, and a legal and valid plan is the only way to ensure you accomplish your personal and charitable goals.

How Do I Get Started?

A will is your most basic planning tool. It's the centerpiece of your overall estate plan. A will helps you detail your possessions and document how you want them distributed. If you have complicated assets or own substantial property, a trust might be a better option for you.

Choose your executor. You'll need to decide who will carry out the terms of your plan. Your executor should be someone who shares the same values as you and whom you trust implicitly. The person you choose doesn't have to be a relative.

Name your durable power of attorney. Choose someone you can depend on to handle your affairs should you become incapacitated, mentally or physically. This person will have the authority to act on your behalf.

Create an advanced health care directive. Appoint a person who understands your health care needs and wishes, and whom you trust to carry them out with your best interests in mind. This takes effect only if you can't make your own health care decisions. It can be revoked or changed at any time, assuming you're competent to do so.

Taking Action to Save Lives

I just wanted to do something to stop the cancer.

– Jeanne Harris

Jeanne and Keith Harris
Champion Society Members

Jeanne Harris' family has been affected by cancer numerous times. Most devastating was the loss of her father in 2001. A friend encouraged Jeanne to participate in her local Relay For Life® event, but she initially hesitated. She eventually changed her mind and now says the event had a dramatic impact on her life.

“My heart turned around, and I just wanted to do something to stop the cancer. Relay inspires you to take action. This is the action I took.”

Jeanne and husband Keith's course of action was to honor her father in their wills with a gift to the American Cancer Society.

“I wanted a way to help, a way to give – a way to stop this disease. A will is such a simple thing to do, and something you should do. You never know when something might happen.”

Jeanne notes the similar benefits of participating in both the Relay program and planned giving to the American Cancer Society – both are steps toward making a difference.

Jeanne and Keith look forward to living long, fulfilling lives with their three young children. They also want to help increase the odds that future generations never experience the heartache of cancer.

Our generous donors have made estate gifts one of the American Cancer Society's largest sources of funding.

Benefits of a Charitable Gift

How can the American Cancer Society help you with your estate plan?

We're not here to give you legal advice, but if you're interested in creating a lifesaving gift to end cancer, we can assist you and your advisors in making an informed decision.

We can help you determine the right gift option for your situation – and there's absolutely no cost or obligation for our services.

Florence Preisler
Champion Society Member

I'm more determined than ever that the causes of cancer will be found and that someday it will be one of those diseases people don't have anymore.

Florence Preisler honors her husband, Murray, whom she lost to cancer, through a gift arrangement that supplements her income. Her charitable gift annuity provides her with additional retirement income and also tax benefits.

What are the benefits of leaving a gift to charity in my estate plans?

Most people who decide to include a gift in their will or trust don't do it for the tax savings, but there are financial advantages, including those listed below.

- A gift through your will or trust costs you nothing right now, so it won't affect your everyday cash flow.
- Gifts of appreciated assets, such as stocks, bonds, or even real estate, could help you avoid or defer capital gains tax.
- Gifting your retirement plan could help you leave more of your estate to your heirs, as retirement assets are taxed at higher rates.
- Gifts through your will may be exempt from state and federal estate taxes.
- A gift through your will or trust could help you give a larger and more impactful gift than you ever thought possible and save even more lives from cancer.

Planned giving presents an incredible opportunity to help people realize a number of their most important objectives with respect to both family and charity. I'm literally helping people establish their own personal legacies.

- Dawn D. Hallman, JD, Hallman & Associates, P.C.

As an estate planning attorney and American Cancer Society planned giving supporter and volunteer, Dawn Hallman encourages her clients to consider including a charity in their will and estate plans.

Longtime Connections Lead to Lifesaving Support

Supporting the American Cancer Society's lifesaving work is an easy choice for Peter Landecker. He's learned firsthand the progress we're making in saving lives from cancer through his local American Cancer Society planning professionals.

"They always tell me about the latest advances. I'm a retired astrophysics scientist with a PhD in experimental physics, so I'm especially interested in research," Peter says.

“

Since I lost my grandfather and grandmother to lung cancer, if I can do something to help the American Cancer Society find a partial cure, that's something I'd like to do.

– Peter Landecker
Champion Society Member

Peter worked with his local American Cancer Society planning professional to honor his grandparents in his estate plan through a living trust.

"They helped me with the wording in my living trust so there'd be no problems in putting the funds to good use. And with no income or estate taxes, because I've made the charity my beneficiary, my living trust is helping my dollars go farther," says Peter.

Now retired, Peter has time to enjoy his favorite hobbies. Those include music – he plays the violin in his local orchestra – astronomy, photography, scuba diving, and travel.

Peter also enjoys the longtime relationship he and his American Cancer Society colleagues share. Peter says, "Their contact has been personal, warm, and welcoming. The continuity they have provided is refreshing."

Peter's mother, Mildred, decided to include the American Cancer Society in her own living trust. Because their family has been personally touched by cancer several times – giving back seemed like the natural choice to them.

Personal Stories of Hope

Ask cancer survivor Loretta Gelbaugh and her husband Homer if their marriage of 35 years has flown by, and they'll tell you undoubtedly so. Homer and Loretta married and moved to rural Pennsylvania the same year. "We had big life plans ... and it was a life-changing year," Loretta recalls.

Loretta and Homer Gelbaugh

That same year, Loretta's annual mammogram revealed she had breast cancer. "It was a bolt out of the blue. I had no history of breast cancer, no symptoms ... nothing," she says. After a mastectomy, Loretta became an advocate for annual mammograms and spreads the word to every woman she knows.

Because of her cancer experience, the Gelbaughs decided to include the American Cancer Society in their wills to make a difference in the fight against cancer.

"It takes money for programs and research, and the timing was perfect," says Loretta.

Jerry Hite and her late husband, David, were both diagnosed with cancer. David needed special treatment more than 200 miles away from home but was able to benefit from free lodging at the ACS Hope Lodge® facility in St. Louis.

"We felt like we had come home to a place where it doesn't matter how much money you have or how sick you are – everyone is there for each other," says Jerry.

After a discussion with her children, Jerry decided to support others by leaving her home to the American Cancer Society through her will.

Our Work Improves Lives

One of the big contributions the American Cancer Society brings to the cancer fight is its research. But they also focus on the people they serve. It's about really caring and being a resource for people.

– Dr. Miyamoto, Research Grantee/Oncologist

Research that Reaches People

The nearly $400 million in innovative research we currently fund may start in a lab, but its real impact is felt by the people who benefit from it. By helping produce better and more accessible treatments, finding factors that may cause cancer, and improving quality of life for anyone facing cancer, we can fight cancer before it appears and create better outcomes when it does.

Patient Support to Improve Lives

The American Cancer Society works to ensure no one feels alone at any point on their cancer journey by providing resources like our 24/7 helpline, free rides to medical appointments, and free places to stay for people traveling to treatment.

Advocacy so Change Becomes Reality

By activating grassroots volunteers nationwide, the American Cancer Society Cancer Action Network<sup>SM</sup> (ACS CAN) fights cancer in city halls, statehouses, and Congress by elevating the patient voice to advance policy change.

Please contact us if we can assist you or your advisors at 1-800-227-1885. Our planning services are always free. If you would like to include a gift for the American Cancer Society, please contact us so that we may welcome you into our Champion Society.

For more than 100 years, we have helped lead an evolution in the way the world prevents, detects, treats, and thinks about cancer.

We know how to identify the most promising cancer research. Your generosity has funded thousands of scientists, 50 of whom have won the Nobel Prize.

Your support helps us provide information and answers when people with cancer and their caregivers need them through our 24/7 helpline at 1-800-227-2345 and our cancer.org website.

Our volunteers help people with cancer get to medical appointments and treatment. Our Road To Recovery® program removes barriers to cancer treatment by providing free transportation to appointments.

Our Hope Lodge® communities provide a home away from home for people with cancer and their caregivers in a supportive, caring environment so they can focus on getting better.

Every cancer. Every life.
